The Ashland Eagle thinks that what Ireland needs is an "Irish" that will rip up the back.

"About all the writer knows about the Ford," admits the Moberly Inquirer, "is a lot of naughty stories."

"March came in like a lion this year," notes the Lexington News. "As a weather prophet it usually goes out like a lion."

The Hopkins Journal has noticed that lots of folks "don't care what it costs" so long as the other fellow has to pay for it.

It is said outdoor sleeping makes people beautiful, but after viewing a few tramps the Canton Press is troubled with doubt.

The Howell County Gazette finds cause for rejoicing in the fact that the Ozark peach crop has not been killed a single time this season so far.

Russell Gregg, 19-year-old son of Harry Gregg, a hardware merchant of Metz, accidentally shot and killed himself Thursday evening near his home.

Newspapers say profiteers are passing into history. "But don't blame history," implies the Pleasant Hill Times. "It can't help what passes into it."

"Man comes into the world with nothing on him," notes the Fayette Advertiser. "But let him run for office and he will find a very different situation."

In Benton county the other day, Fred Pippin and Miss Nina Bird were married. The bride may have been a Bird, but she is now certainly a Pippin.

"I have been in Aurora only four years," announces the editor of the Aurora Advertiser. "But have seen a lot of life go out of long dresses in short ones."

The Pleasant Hill Times reports that "Don't spit on the floor, try the ceiling" is the cordial invitation to eat in a hotel posted in a Pleasant Hill place of business.

The Fayette Advertiser thinks a St. Louis man was mistaken in saying there was a shortage of plumbers. It thinks that most of them were merely on the way back after their tools.

Miss Hamilton, ninety-two years old and his wife, eighty-five years old, celebrated their fifty-ninth wedding anniversary Tuesday of last week at their home near St. Joseph, Mo.

case who being asked how many children he had, replied, "About nine." That may have been a very proper answer. The witness probably knew more of his home conditions than those who demanded more accuracy.

The following from the Warrensburg Star-Journal sounds as if it might have appeared in a forty-year-old column: "Richard Cud, a negro of Georgetown, Mo., made his annual visit to Warrensburg recently, selling sausages. As per usual he did a good business."

One of the potent reasons for Marshall's turning down the "city manager" plan of municipal government, was that while a mayor and council work for practically nothing, the commission plan as outlined by its friends would mean an outlay of something like $5,000 a year.

Mrs. Frank Turpin of the Clearmont neighborhood is one farmer's wife who must surely be allowed to keep the butter money. The News reports that during January and February she churned and sold 259 pounds of butter and intends to make a thousand at least by the end of the year.

The death of Dr. W. G. Safford at his home on Sunday recorded the passing of another among Tarkio's oldest residents. He was the seventh generation of an English family which emigrated to Ipswich, Conn., in 1669, and he had been a resident and practicing physician in Atchison county since 1881.

"Col. R. M. Johnson in talking on radio music, recalls the time when he sat by the fire in his log cabin over in Platte and hushed his firstborn by pulling a sounding splinter on the wall of hewed logs," reports the Bolton Herald. "Now his great grandchildren are quiet with a radio receiver at their ears."

A farmer of the Farrelview country recently attended a sale of fine hogs and not seeing the county agent, J. M. Huston, there, wrote him the following letter:

"Dear Mr. Huston—I was at the sale yesterday. I found several pigs of your breed there, and there were a great many good hogs, and I was surprised at not seeing you there."

Down in Mexico, Mo., there is one nephew whose uncle will probably not date on him, though he will doubtless be his constant companion. The nephew happened to be born within ten minutes of the uncle the other day, when the stork visited Mrs. Dave Clark and her daughter, Mrs. E. D. Moore, in the same hour and the same house.

Odesa had a "wash tub war" the other day. One merchant started it by putting a display of tubs in the window at 75 cents each. The rival merchant promptly cut this figure, then the first came back and "lowered" them a bit. This process was repeated until tubs were selling at 39 cents each, and every happy home had a new tub.

After Mrs. Warren Reuter, of Ash Grove, had gone to bed she remembered that she had hidden a revolver in the bed somewhere, and tried to locate it. She finally found it among the bed clothes and was moving it when it was discharged, the bullet entering one of her legs above the knee and coming out several inches lower down.

W. D. Smith of Carrollton, former executive clerk in the office of Governor Hyde, has been picked by the governor for secretary of the state fair. Smith is a real estate dealer and has made a specialty of selling Texas lands, having conducted railroad excursions into that state. He also was paid large sums for making investigations for the state blue sky department.

A negro, claiming a wizard's power to cure all ailments, is reaping a harvest from the credulous among the country folks near Columbia. His three favorite methods of cure are doses of sulphur, magic rubbing and the instruction to "go home and bathe in greasy dishwater." This latter should prove easy, at least, to the housewives dependent on him for recovery.

Mrs. A. E. Tindall, living with her son, W. A. (Cap.) Tindall, was 93 years old on March 6 and is probably the oldest person in Maryville. She is just one week older than N. B. Lamar, who celebrated his 93rd birthday Friday. The Tindall family came to Nodaway county in the fall of 1880 and lived four miles southeast of Maryville for a number of years. Mrs. Tindall has been living in Maryville for twenty years.

When the blizzard was raging and the deep snow drifting as February made its exit, an old pioneer died in a Jackson county village 20 miles east of Kansas City. No casket or undertaker could be secured by roads owing to the drifting snow, so an airplane made two trips there from Kansas City, the first time carrying the casket strapped under the plane and the second time bringing the funeral conductor.

Thursday, just after noon, as No. 62 was passing through Renick, George Peacher, a boy 13 years old, attempted to get on the train and fell under a car and had both legs severed.

There was $7,500 worth of postage on a letter William Alloskivski of Japan recently received from his parents in Russia. It came from Mogilov and had fifteen 1,000-ruble stamps on it. In normal times these would have been worth the $7,500. Nowadays, however, the ruble, once worth 50 cents in American money, is worth—well, the market reports don't try to tell how little.

The peculiarity of asking an inverted question is noticeable in a great many people, especially negroes. Instead of asking, "Have you such and such a thing?" they will ask, "You ain't got such-and-such a thing, have you?" But the story is told in Harrisonville, that two archbishops with the top spinning mania met. "Hey, Bill, come here. Have yer got a top?" asked one. Now Bill had a top, and instead of saying so, he replied, "I ain't got a bottom."

J. Charles Cabanne, 76 years old, president of the St. Louis Dairy Company and member of a pioneer French family that settled in that section, died Tuesday from a throat wound he inflicted the day before. He had been despondent because of poor health following an attack of pneumonia and grippe, members of the family said. He was a direct descendant of Mme. Chouteau, said to have been the first white woman to establish a home on the west bank of the Mississippi.

"We told last week," grins the Lathrop Optimist, "about the phenomena of getting three eggs a day from our chicken house and not owning a hen. A few hours after the paper came out, Aunt Mary Chenoweth called the editor at his home to inform him he didn't have anything to brag about, as she had only three hens and was getting two eggs a day. If we ever start in the chicken business we're going to get a setting of eggs from Aunt Mary's three hens."

Those who have crossed the Big Muddy at Booneville will be interested to learn that both the ancient ferry boats which shuttled that turbid stream are now safely in dry land berths, on the Howard county side of the line, some distance from the river shore. Last fall during the high water, they were tied up there, and when the water fell, it went down so rapidly that the boats could not be moved in. Now they will have to stay there until the Missouri goes on another rampage.

Now comes Frank Gohn of Burlington Junction with a list of relics which lays the others in the shade. He has a Bible, published in 1766, the leaves of which are yellow with age that of printing is scarcely legible. Then there is a copy of the New York Herald, dated Saturday, April 15, 1865. He also has a gopher, made by himself, out of mahogany, that has been in use for more than 145 years; and two feather pillows that have been in use about 80 years.—Burlington Junction Post.

R. L. Cannon is the new mayor of Gilliam and on Monday issued a warning that "the devil can't invade this Missouri town along with Chicago shimmy shakers and Salome dancers." Cannon was elected on that platform as a result of a town row that among other things marked the passing of public dance halls. A few days ago Gilliam was happy with Mayor Davidson, an editor in the chair. Then along came the dancing girls of Chicago who appeared in Gilliam's dance hall. They shook wicked shoulders, etc. Outraged and raging fathers and mothers who watched through the keyhole as they performed the dance before the younger set served notice the girls would have to buy some clothes or leave town. The girls left. The city council passed an ordinance against dancing. Davidson looked up the constitution of the United States, declaring he could not find anything therein barring shimmy shaking, refused to sign the ordinance and resigned. The young folks are planning to re-elect him next election.

According to the Slater Rustler, two dams will be built soon at Devil's Elbow on the Osage River, 25 miles south of Versailles. The plan is to furnish power for lighting many central Missouri towns. Two dams will be built, because Osage river is regarded by the government as navigable, and the water must therefore be maintained at its normal depth. Several artesian wells will also be dug to re-enforce the river power. Efforts have been made for forty years to obtain approval of the plan, according to the Rustler.

"A special baggage car, with separate, steam-heated compartments and with all the regal luxury that usually attends visitors from the far East, arrived this morning at Independence," relates the Independence Examiner. "The occupants of the car were many different representatives of the jungle aristocracy and they were on their way to the Horn zoological arena at Independence. Most of the new arrivals have already been spoken for by buyers in different parts of the country and soon will be shipped out again. They came mainly from Vancouver, B. C., but they were brought into captivity from different parts of the world. Buyers from everywhere on earth assemble at the zoological arena here to make their purchases. The arrivals from the wilds include two black leopards, two Bengal tigers, one Sumatra tiger, two Siberian wolves, two mountain lions from British Columbia, two wopis (similar to our elk), one northern white-tailed deer, two Canadian black bears, one African wart hog, two caracaras, one India spotted leopard, one European wild boar, one zebra, two African lions and five kangaroos from Australia."
